

John was formerly a lecturer at the University of Bath, where he was Director of Studies in the School of Education, with responsibility for the professional development of teachers. His principal areas of research were course design and the role of pictures in both teaching and learning. He has worked extensively overseas as an educational consultant and has given lectures and presentations all over the world, including lecture tours to Australia and New Zealand in 2008 and 2011. John is now a freelance lecturer, who has been a popular speaker on the NADFAS circuit for a number of years. For his talks he draws upon his eclectic range of interests and enthusiasms, which include antique corkscrews, Norman Rockwell and the Shakers of North America.